Lisa Graham McMinn

Lisa Graham McMinn (Ph.D., Portland State University) is professor of sociology in the department of sociology and social work at George Fox University in Oregon. She lives in a home called Fern Creek that she and her husband built. Together they keep and tend chickens and bees that help fertilize and pollinate the vegetables and fruits they grow for themselves and others.

Lisa's other books include Growing Strong Daughters (Baker), Sexuality and Holy Longing (Jossey-Bass) and The Contented Soul (InterVarsity Press). Her articles have appeared in Journal of Psychology and Christianity, Sociology of Religion, Journal of Psychology and Theology, Research on Christian Higher Education and Christianity Today.

Megan Anna Neff

Megan Anna Neff (M.Div., Princeton Theological Seminary) has lived in Malawi and Ghana, where she became a student of African Christianity. She currently resides with her husband, Luke, in Portland, Oregon, where she works with families with newborns as a postpartum doula. As she and Luke are expanding their family this year, Megan Anna enjoys thinking through how to walk gently and creatively with a newborn. She enjoys hand-making toys and preparing for cloth diapering and is excited to introduce their child to the goodness of God's creation.
